VI. OMBUDSPERSONS

- A. Principles. The AILG serves many functions for its members. It is difficult to legislate how the AILG should operate under all circumstances, because there is no one process which would satisfy every function or every circumstance. Some of these conflicts include:
 1. The AILG and all of its processes should be open to the community of FSILGs. At the same time, the AILG is also expected to respect the privacy of individual organizations and individuals.
 2. The AILG should operate for the greater good of the FSILG community. At the same time, the AILG needs to respect the diversity of its member organizations, strive to avoid harming individual organizations, and understand the impact of its actions on individual organizations.
 3. The AILG is - and should be - formed primarily of volunteers. So it is important that the AILG ensures that its processes are respectful of that volunteer time and are not unduly onerous. It is also important that the AILG be able to respond quickly and effectively under some circumstances. At the same time, for most issues, it is very important that there is sufficient opportunity for involvement and feedback from the plenary at large.
- B. The role of the Ombudsperson is to ensure that the AILG is acting in a principled way and striking an adequate balance between these conflicting needs.
- C. Any affiliated individual may request assistance from the Ombudsperson. They may request:
 1. That the Ombudsperson consider whether a written process of the AILG is being followed.
 2. That the Ombudsperson consider whether any of the principles above were violated (even when the formal policies were followed).
 3. That the Ombudsperson assist in resolving communications issues, if a request through the normal channels has not gotten results for that member.

- D. The Ombudsperson does not take stands on particular issues but instead makes sure that the processes used by the AILG to resolve an issue are fair and principled.
- E. The Ombudsperson may (if there are more than one) act individually to try to resolve complaints. Their primary role is to work directly with individual members and officers of the AILG to resolve complaints. Beyond that:
 - 1. If a majority of the Ombudspersons agree, they may bring an issue before the plenary. They may also make a recommendation to the plenary as to how the issue should be resolved (again, if a majority agree).
 - 2. A majority of the Ombudspersons may call a special meeting of the plenary, if required to reasonably exercise the previous power.
- F. If the Ombudspersons do not choose to take these actions, individual members of the plenary may still call a meeting or bring a motion as described in the bylaws.
- G. The Ombudspersons are ultimately responsible directly to the plenary. The plenary may remove them by a vote of 2/3 (two thirds) majority of those present, providing that this also represents a majority of the Voting members. In the case of resignation or removal, the board may designate an individual to serve until the next plenary meeting, when the voting group that originally chose that Ombudsperson may elect another.
- H. The Ombudspersons may not serve on the Board or act as committee chairs.
- I. The Ombudspersons should, when requested, make an effort to protect the privacy or identity of the complainer. However, if the Ombudspersons feel that that is impractical in a particular case, they may inform the complainer that they would be unable to both resolve the complaint and honor the request for anonymity.
- J. Election
 - 1. The AILG will assign each member to one voting group. The AILG may choose to only have one such group, in which case the voting group is the entire plenary.
 - 2. Initially, there will be three voting groups, consisting of fraternities, sororities, and independent living groups. Subsequently, changes to any group requires a 2/3 vote of every group.
 - 3. These groups will elect the Ombudsperson annually for terms of one year, immediately after elections to the Board. The elections process is:
 - a. Nominations will be taken from the floor, according to the usual elections procedures.
 - b. Each Representative will submit a ballot with a list of candidates, in order of their preference.
 - c. The votes will be tallied by group, starting with the group with the most members. The candidate receiving a majority from that group is elected. The process is repeated for each remaining group, considering only candidates that have not already been elected.

- d. There shall be at least one Ombudsperson. If at least one candidate is elected and there are no other candidates or no other candidates receive a majority, then the election is considered complete.
- e. Individuals who are elected serve as the Ombudsperson for the entire AILG and do not represent a particular subgroup.
